INHABITANTS OF THE OLD MANSE

The Old Manse was built in 1770 in Concord, Massachusetts, by William Emerson (1743-1776), the grandfather of Transcendentalist writer Ralph Waldo Emerson (1803-1882). William Emerson (1743-1776) went to Harvard and in 1765 succeeded the late Rev. Daniel Bliss (1715-1764) as minister at First Parish Church in Concord. He married Bliss's daughter, Phebe Bliss Emerson (1741-1825), in 1766 and had five children, including Rev. William Emerson (1769-1811) (minister at First Church in Boston) and Mary Moody Emerson (1774-1863) (writer and intellectual).

On August 16, 1776, Emerson left Concord to join the Continental Army as a chaplain at Fort Ticonderoga. Once there, he caught dysentery and was discharged in September. On the way back to Concord, he died at the home of Rev. Benajah Roots in Rutland, Vermont on October 20, 1776.

After Emerson's death, Rev. Ezra Ripley (1751-1841) took over as pastor in Concord in November 1778 and boarded at The Old Manse in one of the attic chambers. Two years later, Ripley married Emerson's widow, Phebe Bliss Emerson (1741-1825), who already had five children from her marriage with Emerson. Together, the Ripleys had three more children.

Ripley's stepson, Rev. William Emerson (1769-1811), married Ruth Haskins (1768-1853), and had eight children (three died young), including Ralph Waldo Emerson (1803-1882). Rev. William Emerson (1769-1811) died at age 42, and Ralph Waldo Emerson was raised by his mother. His aunt, Mary Moody Emerson (1774-1863), had a large influence on his education. After attending Boston Latin School and Harvard, Ralph Waldo Emerson became the minister at Second Church in Boston in 1829. His first wife, Ellen Louise Tucker, died in 1831, and he resigned his position as minister. Emerson spent 1833 traveling in Europe, where he visited Thomas Carlyle (1795-1881).

After returning to Boston, Emerson and his mother were invited by his step-grandfather, Ezra Ripley, to stay at The Old Manse in October 1834. Ripley's wife, Phebe Bliss Emerson Ripley (1741-1825), had died in 1825, and two of his children (Sarah and Daniel) had died shortly after their mother. Ripley's remaining child, Rev. Samuel Ripley (1783-1847), was the minister at First Parish in Waltham, where he lived with his wife, Sarah Alden Bradford Ripley (1793-1867), a scholar who had been taught by John Allyn (1767-1833), Jacob Cushing (1730-1809), and on her own, and who herself taught students out of their home.

Emerson and his mother stayed with Ezra Ripley at The Old Manse for a year, and during this time, he wrote the first draft of his important Transcendentalist work, Nature, in the upstairs study. In September 1835, Emerson and his second wife, Lidian Jackson (1802-1892), moved into a new home in Concord.

In 1836, Ezra Ripley gave the town of Concord some of his land so that they could rebuild the North Bridge and commemorate the battle there. Ezra Ripley died in September of 1841, and in July of the following year, Ripley's son, Rev. Samuel Ripley (1783-1847), rented The Old Manse to Nathaniel Hawthorne (1804-1864) and his new wife, Sophia Peabody Hawthorne (1809-1871). They arrived on their wedding day, July 9, 1842; as a wedding gift, Henry David Thoreau (1817-1862) had planted a vegetable garden for them at the house. Between 1843 and 1845, Nathaniel and Sophia etched messages into the windowpanes in the dining room and the upstairs study, using Sophia's diamond ring. Their daughter, Una, was born in the house in March 1844. During their stay, Hawthorne wrote (in the same upstairs study that Ralph Waldo Emerson had used) a collection of stories, Mosses from an Old Manse, which he later published in 1846. It was this book that gave The Old Manse its name: a Scottish term for a minister's house.

After more than 30 years in Waltham, Samuel Ripley was ready to retire. In 1841, George Frederick Simmons (1814-1855) had taken over as the senior minister in Waltham, while Ripley had taken on the ministry of the church in Lincoln. In the summer of 1845, Samuel Ripley decided to move to The Old Manse, and informed the Hawthornes that they would need to move out by October. The Ripleys moved into the Manse in the spring of 1846; Samuel continued ministering to the Lincoln congregation, and Sarah continued tutoring students in the house. Samuel died a year and a half later, in November 1847.

Sarah lived for another 20 years in The Old Manse. Her daughter, Mary Emerson Ripley (1820-1907), had married George Frederick Simmons (1814-1855) a month before Samuel's death and lived with her family in a house next door to the Manse. Another daughter, Elizabeth Bradford Ripley (1819-1892), lived with Sarah in the Manse. Sarah had a great number of intellectual visitors. She read numerous languages, including Latin, Greek, German, French, Italian, and Spanish, and her books are still part of The Old Manse book collection. She continued to teach young students and her grandchildren, including painter Edward Emerson Simmons (1852-1831), until her death in 1867.

One of Sarah and Samuel's children, Sophia Bradford Ripley (1833-1914), married James Bradley Thayer (1831-1902), who was a professor at Harvard Law School. After Sarah's death, Sophia inherited The Old Manse.

Elizabeth Bradford Ripley continued living in the house, in between travels. Other family members lived in the house for months at a time – many, such as George Partridge Bradford (1807-1890), stayed every summer.

In 1896, Sophia's daughter, Sarah Ripley Thayer (1874-1939), the granddaughter of Sarah Alden Bradford Ripley (1793-1867), married John Worthington Ames (1871-1954). An architect who eventually opened a private practice in Boston, Ames was the grandson of Sarah Alden Bradford Ripley's sister, Margaret Stevenson Bradford Ames (1805-1847). Sarah Ripley Thayer Ames (1874-1939) inherited the house, and the Ames and their extended family (including the Thayers) lived in The Old Manse during the summers. At least one of their children, Sophia Ripley Ames Boyer (1907-1972), was born there. The family also opened the house to occasional public tours.

When Sarah Ripley Thayer Ames (1874-1939) died in 1939, her husband, John Worthington Ames (1871-1954), who was the executor of her estate, sold The Old Manse, its contents, and its land to The Trustees of Reservations, who promised to keep the house open to the public as the family had done, preserving its unique history.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PAPERS

The Old Manse Manuscripts document the lives of the families who inhabited the Old Manse from its construction in 1770 until the time that The Trustees of Reservations purchased the house from the estate of Sarah Ripley Thayer Ames (1874-1939) in 1939. The collection spans the years 1755 to 1938; the bulk of the material is from the 1810s to the 1880s. The collection is organized into seven series: Emerson Family, Ripley Family, Bradford Family, Simmons Family, Ames Family, Other People, and Photographs. There is also an Excel file that details botanical specimens from the collection. There are cross references in the Box and Folder list to the Excel file.

Series I, Emerson Family, is organized into six subseries: Mary Moody Emerson (1774-1863); Polly Pope Emerson (1836-1910); Ralph Waldo Emerson (1803-1882); William Emerson (1743-1776); William Emerson (1769-1811); and William Emerson (1801-1868).

Many of the documents relate directly to The Old Manse. There are four 18th century documents. The first is a deed dated April 16, 1770 that transfers, from David Brown to William Emerson (1743-1776), the land where The Old Manse was subsequently built by Emerson.

The second is a 1790 document that, well after the 1776 death of William Emerson (1743-1776), appoints a committee of three (Ephraim Wood, Nathan Barrett, and Humphrey Barrett) to appraise Emerson's real estate.

The third is an April 1791 report by the committee regarding the settlement of Emerson's estate. The report, which includes a detailed description of the contents of the estate, was countersigned by Emerson's widow, Phebe Bliss Emerson Ripley (1741-1825); by her second husband, Ezra Ripley (1751-1841); and by Emerson's son, William Emerson (1769-1811).

In the fourth, a deed from that same day, April 14, 1791, Emerson's son, William Emerson (1769-1811), transferred his portion of The Old Manse to Ezra Ripley.

There are also two 19th century documents relating to The Old Manse. When Phebe Bliss Emerson Ripley died in 1825, a document was drawn up that released her second husband, Ezra Ripley, from claims by relatives of her first husband, William Emerson (1743-1776), to her portion of The Old Manse. The document, dated 1825 May 25, was signed by William Emerson (1743-1776)'s daughter, Mary Moody Emerson (1774-1863), and by his grandsons, Ralph Waldo Emerson (1803-1882) and William Emerson (1801-1868).

In 1826, a memorandum was signed by Ralph Waldo Emerson (1803-1882) and his brother, William Emerson (1801-1868), acknowledging receipt of a payment from Ezra Ripley (1751-1841) for their share of the estate of their father, William Emerson (1769-1811). They promised to share the payment with their brothers, Edward Bliss Emerson (1805-1834), Robert Bulkeley Emerson (1807-1859), and Charles Chauncy Emerson (1808-1836).

Additionally, there are three letters in this series. One is from a 13-year-old Ralph Waldo Emerson to his aunt, Mary Moody Emerson (1774-1863), regarding an article he read about the French preacher Jean-Baptiste Massillon.

The second is a 1766 letter (missing its signature) from William Emerson (1743-1776) to his mother-in-law, Phebe Walker Bliss (1713-1797), regarding his travel plans with his wife, Phebe Bliss Emerson (1741-1825).

The third is an 1867 letter from Polly Pope Emerson (1836-1910) to her sister, Nancy Maria Pope Hunkins (1845-1914), describing her life in Woodbine, Iowa. It is unclear if Polly Pope Emerson is related to the Emerson family who inhabited The Old Manse.

Series II, Ripley Family, is organized into seven subseries: Ezra Ripley (1751-1841); Jane Francis Ripley (d. 1888); Lydia Kent Ripley (1725-1816); Phebe Bliss Emerson Ripley (1741-1825); Phoebe Bliss Ripley (1824-1888); Samuel Ripley (1783-1847); and Sarah Alden Bradford Ripley (1793-1867).

The first subseries, Ezra Ripley (1751-1841), contains more than 300 handwritten sermons given by Ripley, from 1783 to 1805. The places and dates of the sermons were noted by Ripley. Some of the sermons were delivered at multiple places and in multiple years.

In addition, there are some other writings, including an undated account of the Revolutionary War battle at the North Bridge in Concord; genealogical notes regarding the Ripley family; lectures and notes on religious topics; and a notebook containing notes about religious conferences held at Ripley's house in 1810.

There is also some correspondence, including an 1837 letter to George Washington Blagden (1802-1884) regarding resolutions before the Convention of Congregational Ministers; an 1818 letter to Henry Fitts regarding Ripley's son, Daniel Bliss Ripley (1784-1825); two letters (1788-1789) regarding financial matters; an 1808 letter regarding a church bell in Concord; and one undated letter regarding the Harvard board of overseers.

The second subseries, Jane Francis Ripley (d. 1888), contains a card announcing the 1888 death of Sister Jane Francis Ripley at the Couvent de la Visitation in the District of Columbia.

The third subseries, Lydia Kent Ripley (1725-1816), contains an article, probably from the 1890s, regarding Lydia's epitaph. She was Ezra Ripley (1751-1841)'s mother.

The fourth subseries, Phebe Bliss Emerson Ripley (1741-1825), contains a cross reference to an April 1791 report regarding the settlement of William Emerson (1743-1776)'s estate. The report, which includes a detailed description of the contents of the estate, was countersigned by Emerson's widow, Phebe Bliss Emerson Ripley (1741-1825), and is located in Series I, Emerson Family.

The fifth subseries, Phoebe Bliss Ripley (1824-1888), contains an 1840s notebook with notes in German. Phoebe Bliss Ripley (1824-1888) was the unmarried daughter of Sarah Alden Bradford Ripley (1793-1867) and Samuel Ripley (1783-1847).

The sixth subseries, Samuel Ripley (1783-1847), contains a letter from Ripley to the Independent Congregational Society in Waltham, offering to give the church the books he purchased from the W.L. Library and sending a portrait of Rev. William Wellstead to hang in the vestry. There are numerous articles and lectures, as well as more than 700 sermons by Ripley. The sermons, which are dated from 1809 to 1847, each have an alphabetic code given by Ripley. Some sermons are marked with the year, and some sermons are marked with more than one year. In addition, there are a variety of other materials, including a list of books not returned to Samuel's library from 1795 to 1800; receipts for various purchases; and a record of his sermons preached from 1820 to 1821.

The seventh subseries, Sarah Alden Bradford Ripley (1793-1867), contains some correspondence, including an 1849 letter from Convers Francis (1795-1863) regarding a book by one of Sarah's former students, Osmond Tiffany; four letters from clergyman and scientist Thomas Hill (1818-1891) regarding mathematical topics; and one letter from an unidentified sender regarding binomial differentials. There are also many botanical specimens collected by Sarah that are listed individually in the accompanying Excel file.

Series III, Bradford Family, is organized into three subseries: Daniel Neal Bradford (1797-1821); Gamaliel Bradford (1763-1824); and George Partridge Bradford (1807-1890).

The first subseries, Daniel Neal Bradford (1797-1821), contains two notebooks of botanical specimens that were collected in Massachusetts by Bradford, probably sometime between 1800 and his death in 1821. The specimens have been cataloged individually in PastPerfect. Bradford was a brother of Sarah Alden Bradford Ripley (1793-1867).

The second subseries, Gamaliel Bradford (1763-1824), contains genealogical notes regarding the Bradford family that were written in 1812 by Gamaliel Bradford, the father of Sarah Alden Bradford Ripley (1793-1867).

The third subseries, George Partridge Bradford (1807-1890), contains many writings by Sarah Alden Bradford Ripley's brother, who was a teacher at Brook Farm, a utopian community in Boston inspired by Transcendentalist ideals. The writings include lectures and articles on literary and historical topics, as well as some sermons. (Bradford was a graduate of the Harvard Divinity School.) There is also an account book dated 1835 to 1846 that contains student names and expenses for towns around New England where Bradford must have traveled and taught.

Series IV, Simmons Family, is organized into four subseries: George Frederick Simmons (1814-1855); Lucia Hammatt Simmons (1786-1859); William Hammatt Simmons (1812-1841); and William Hammatt Simmons (b. 1845).

The first subseries, George Frederick Simmons (1814-1855), is the largest. It contains materials regarding the minister who married Mary Emerson Ripley (1820-1907), daughter of Samuel Ripley (1783-1847) and Sarah Alden Bradford Ripley (1793-1867). The subseries contains a small amount of correspondence, including letters to Simmons from John [Dussing?], Frederick A. Farley (1800-1892), August Neander (1789-1850) [William H.?] Robertson, and the Worcester Association of Ministers; a notice from the General Post Office in London; a calling card from Charles Respinger; an inscription from L.O. [Howard?]; and two envelopes from unidentified senders. There is also a fragment of a letter from Simmons to an unidentified recipient.

Also in this subseries are notes by Simmons on a variety of topics, including algebra, the Bible and theology, history, and geometry. Some of the notes are in German.

There are printed 19th century maps of Florence, Germany, Jerusalem, London, Prague, and Switzerland, as well as an 1835 map of land east and west of the Mississippi River.

In addition, there are various other materials, including topography and mechanics plates; a receipt for renting a post office box in Springfield, Massachusetts; an 1845 song to be sung at Harvard's Hasty Pudding Club; and a note by Dr. Downing regarding "equal municipal and political rights to the Jews."

The second subseries, Lucia Hammatt Simmons (1786-1859), contains an 1849 receipt for the purchase of coal in Charlestown, Massachusetts by Lucia, mother of George Frederick Simmons (1814-1855). There is also an undated signature cut from a letter to Lucia from Minnie, sent from 656 Bedford Avenue.

The third subseries, William Hammatt Simmons (1812-1841), contains a fragment of an 1830s letter from an unidentified sender; three commonplace books, 1827-1834; school essays, 1825-1830; an account book, 1810-1835, with loose receipts; and a Massachusetts County Court (Suffolk Co.) record book, 1821-1842. William was the brother of George Frederick Simmons (1814-1855).

The fourth subseries, William Hammatt Simmons (b. 1845), contains some 1867 notes regarding chemistry. William was the son of George Frederick Simmons (1814-1855).

Series V, Ames Family, is organized into three subseries: Frances Margaret Bradford Ames Randall (1866-1968); John Worthington Ames (1871-1954); and William Thayer Ames (1901-1987).

The first subseries, Frances Margaret Bradford Ames Randall (1866-1968), contains an 1882 letter from Frances in Brooklyn, New York, to her sister, Rebecca “Ruby” Ames (1868-1966) in Concord, Massachusetts regarding Frances’s trip to Ireland. There are also two student notebooks containing Frances’s handwritten notes on French exercises (1882) and on science (1883).

The second subseries, John Worthington Ames (1871-1954), contains two school notebooks and a receipt from the time that John Worthington Ames (1871-1954) spent studying in Europe; the materials date from 1885 to 1887. One of the notebooks contains an essay titled “Composition: The Old Manse,” which describes Ames’s memories of The Old Manse. There are also early 20th century genealogical notes regarding the Ripley and Ames families, and a sketchbook from 1881 to 1882 that includes a sketch of his mother, Margaret Plumley Ames (1843-1919). There is one letter, dated July 20, 1936, to “Richard,” regarding ownership of The Old Manse.

The third subseries, William Thayer Ames (1901-1987), contains a 1929 letter to Ames from Gladys Billings inviting him to visit in Woodstock, New York. Ames was an American composer, who was the son of Sarah Ripley Thayer Ames (1874-1939) and John Worthington Ames (1871-1954).

Series VI, Other People, is organized into two subseries: People & Organizations, and Other Material. Each subseries is arranged alphabetically.

The first subseries, People & Organizations, contains some correspondence, including a letter from Thomas Carlyle (1795-1881) to John Chapman dated 1845 Feb 13, which is not included in the printed or online compilation of Carlyle’s letters, and which mentions Ralph Waldo Emerson; an 1810 letter from Samuel Dakin to Benjamin [Welles?] regarding payment of a debt; an 1871 letter from Una Hawthorne (1844-1877) to “My dear Lily” regarding Una Hawthorne’s religious beliefs; and one unidentified envelope and one unidentified letter.

There are some materials about The Old Manse, such as a 1928 Christmas card from the Henry Laughlins that shows a black and white sketch of The Old Manse; two volumes of The Old Manse visitors’ book, 1934-1935 and 1935-1938; an article by Roger Dyer Swaim (1879-) about the history of The Old Manse; a 1903 program for the Emerson Centenary Memorial Exercises; 1920s notes regarding Ezra Ripley (1751-1841)’s purchase of The Old Manse; and a 19th century manuscript titled “Colonel Buttrick’s Epitaph” about the 1775 attack at Concord’s North Bridge.

In addition, there is a large variety of miscellaneous material, including numerous handwritten sermons, dated 1755 to 1808, by Jacob Cushing (1730-1809), who was Sarah Alden Bradford Ripley (1793-1867)’s teacher; a large number of botanical specimens (collected by an unidentified person) that have been cataloged either in PastPerfect or in the accompanying Excel file; sermons by an unidentified minister from 1761 to 1783; an 1846 advertisement by Harrison Gray Otis for a school for young ladies; some early 20th century musical scores by Carl Bohm, Frédéric Chopin, and Vincent Scotto; Abraam Hammatt's signature; an 1890 booklet regarding admission examinations at Harvard; notes by David Loring (b. 1850) on physics; an 1839 intension of marriage between Edwin A. Potter And Sarah A. Sproul; notes by Mr. F.R. Sanborn regarding an accounting of purchases; an account book from 1839 to 1840 showing household purchases; notes on religion, history, and mathematics; and way bills from 1840 to 1843 for the Lowell, Keene, and Brattleborough Mail Stage.

The second subseries, Other Material, contains various unrelated materials, such as an unidentified lock of hair, a chemistry chart, two unsend postcards and one card, some stamps pasted into a printed stamp album, and a copy of the Boston Daily Times from October 8, 1850.

Series VII, Photographs, is organized into two subseries: People, and Places.

The first subseries, People, contains one portrait each of Susannah Rand Francis (1766-1814) (Mrs. Convers Francis); Samuel Ripley (1783-1847); and Sarah Alden Bradford Ripley (1793-1867). There is a portrait that is probably Edward Emerson Simmons (1852-1931) and one portrait of an unidentified woman.

The second subseries, Places, contains various photographs of The Old Manse, dating from the 1880s to the 1930s.
