

Authors for The Atlantic Monthly under Ellery Sedgwick

[Source: theatlantic.com]

Ellery Sedgwick was the Editor of the Atlantic Monthly from 1908 to 1938.

Author	Article Title	Bibliography	Bio
Edith Wharton	Several articles	1908-1933 1878: long association http://www.theatlantic.com/past/docs/unbound/flashbks/wharton.htm	In "Confessions of a Novelist" (April 1933), Wharton scrutinizes her own writing. A commentary of the piece can be found here .
Winston Churchill	Several articles	1912-1938	Churchill mainly discussed war maneuverings in his articles during World War I. Some are here .
Bertrand Russell	Several articles. Notably: "Is a Permanent Peace Possible?" (1915)	1915-1938	In his articles, Russell discusses peace, education, and the future. In one article he goes to Russia to talk with Lenin. In "Is a Permanent Peace Possible?" he traces the causes of WWI. Some articles can be found here .
Reinhold Niebuhr	Several articles. Notably: "Hitler, Reduced to Impotence" and "The Nation's Crime Against the Individual" (1916)	1915-1938	Niebuhr was a theologian, ethicist, and political commentator. He stressed pacifism in most situations. Some articles can be found here .
Robert Frost	"A Group of Poems"	1915	Before Frost moved to England, he sent a poem to Sedgwick, which the Editor dismissed as too long winded for the magazine. Upon Frost's return to America as a successful poet, Sedgwick begged for poems that he could publish. The poems can be read here , and are discussed here .

James Norman Hall	Wrote several articles, his memoir was Kitchener's Mob: The Adventures of an American in Kitchener's Army among other works.	1916-1918	Hall wrote a series of articles about his experiences in World War I for Sedgwick. When his plane was shot down behind German lines in 1918, the flow of articles stopped until he was released from a German prison.
Jane Addams	"The Devil-Baby at Hull House"	1916	Addams wrote a story about superstition, and the struggles of ordinary women. It can be found here .
James Hilton	"Goodbye Mr. Chips!"	1934	"Goodbye Mr. Chips!" was previously published in The British Weekly , but was then sold to the Atlantic . It had so much success in the United States that it warranted a hardcover edition.
Virginia Woolf	"Women Must Weep" "Middlebrow"	May 1938 (585) Jul 1942 (43)	Woolf wrote two articles for Sedgwick. The first urged women to oppose the growing war in Europe, as well as to fight for fair wages. The second discussed art.

OTHER NOTABLE AUTHORS:

James Truslow Adams, Mary Antin, L. Adams Beck, Godfrey Rathbone Benson (Lord Charnwood), Gamaliel Bradford, Pearl S. Buck, William H. Chamberlin, John Jay Chapman, W. Hans Coudenhove, Mazo de la Roche, John Foster Dulles, Walter D. Edmonds, Felix Frankfurter, Robert Dean Frisbie, John Galsworthy, Charles Boardman Hawes, Hudson Hoagland, Albert Kinross, Rudyard Kipling, Walter Lippman, Henry Cabot Lodge, Amy Lowell, Archibald MacLeish, William McFee, Wilma Frances Minor, Margaret Prescott Montague, Samuel Eliot Morrison, Edward A. Newton, Albert J. Nock, Charles Nordhoff, Nora Waln Osland-Hill, Arthur Pound, Agnes Repplier, Eleanor Roosevelt, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Hilda Rose, Carl Sandburg, George Santayana, Harrison W. Smith, Logan Pearsall Smith, William H. Taft, Rabindranath Tagore, Opal Whiteley, Henry Williamson, Wendell L. Willkie, Owen Wister, and Hans Zinsser.